

Regarding the NJ do not call legislation. If anything the law is not strong enough. I still get calls from political groups and charities that I don't wish to get. The calls never come at an opportune time. I assume that calling during my dinner is a planned thing because that's when most people are home. These people just start talking and do not let you get a word in edgewise. That is what they are trained to do. I had to start hanging up on them.

As far as telemarketing creating jobs, I don't care about that anymore. Most of those so called jobs have been outsourced to India, Canada, Ireland etc. Thanks so much for that.

Bottom line: No one should be calling me unless they already have business to discuss with me!

Peter J. Moscatello Jr.